Join the conversation concerning Carifesta’s 1976 landmark discussion of history in the Caribbean literary imaginary with Caribbean women writers and scholars, who will address how contemporary Caribbean writers and thinkers, female in particular, have continued to “quarrel with the past” but moved forward now to critically contend with colonialism’s afterlife in the region.

Panelists include: Faith Smith, Donette Francis and Leah Rosenberg.

Featured writers include: the award winning Dominican-American novelist Angie Cruz and the critically acclaimed Tobagonian poet, playwright and novelist M. NourbeSe Philip.

This event is co-sponsored by the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, Center for Humanities, the Diversity Fund, American Studies, the Department of English, Women’s Studies, and the Africana Center.
